
1922 Asheville City Directory of nurses

1922 Asheville City Directory Listings for "nurse"

In the 1922 Asheville City Directory, there are 253 entries designating nurses. At that time, anyone could call themselves a nurse, trained nurse or graduate nurse. The term "Registered Nurse" was reserved for those who met the criteria to take and then passed the NC State Board of Nurse Examiners test for Registered Nursing.

The Veterans Administration Hospital in Oteen, now known as the Charles George Veterans Administration Hospital, was not considered part of Asheville at this time, Oteen was a separate town, so the nurses working at the VA Hospital in Oteen are not listed. The US Public Health Service ran a separate hospital for veterans in Asheville, Kennilworth and those nurses do appear in the Directory. The African American Blue Ridge Hospital opened in the fall of 1922, so the nurses hired to work there do not appear in this year's directory.

The Tuberculosis Sanitarium - St. Josephs, which would become a general hospital in 1938 was operating in 1922 but no notations appear in the Directory linking a specific nurse to that facility. Norburn Hospital did not open until 1928. The French Broad Hospital, which was renamed Ashton Park Hospital around 1929, opened in 1927.
